Yesterday was the 57th time American voters have elected a President. Not all elections have gone smoothly. Here are five that were officially disputed.

The first election which ended in a dispute was the election of the 1800 our fourth election. The Federalists nominated John Adams to be President and the Charles Pinckney to be Vice President. The Democratic-Republicans nominated Jefferson as President and Aaron Burr as Vice President. The decision was turned over to the House of Representatives. On the 36th ballot Jefferson was selected, but the country had come very close to having Aaron Burr as President.

The election of 1824 was the second and last election decided by the House of Representatives. The four major candidates were John Quincy Adams, Henry Clay, William H Crawford, and Andrew Jackson. When the electors were counted Jackson had 99, Adams 84, Crawford 41 and Clay 37. The election was thrown to the House of Representatives with the three leading candidates competing. Adams won on the first ballot of the House of Representatives.

In 1876 the Democrats nominated Samuel Tilden and the Republicans nominated Rutherford Hayes. The electoral vote however was tight, and in three southern states the results were hotly contested- South Carolina, Florida, and Louisiana. All three states ended up empowering two separate slates of electors. The Congress passed a special law to decide the results of the disputed vote. The commission then met and in each of the three cases of disputed state slates they accepted the Republican slate. The House rejected the findings while the Senate accepted it. The House Democrats threatened a filibuster. The Democrats did not go through with their threat when Hayes agreed to withdraw federal troops from the south thus ending reconstruction when he became President. He was selected.

In the election of 1888 Grover Cleveland the incumbent Democratic President faced Republican challenger Benjamin Harrison. Cleveland won the popular vote but lost the electoral vote. This took place because Cleveland overwhelmingly won states with smaller number of electoral votes while losing certain key states by only a few votes. Harrison became President but lost to Cleveland in a rematch four years later.

2000 Most Americans went to sleep believing that Bush had won, they woke up to learn that the election had not been decided. The margin between Bush and Gore was 537 votes out of a total of 6,000,000. The Gore campaign demanded a recount in many areas of Florida and won motion after motion in local and Federal courts allowing the recount to continue. Finally the Bush campaign turned to the US Supreme Court. The vote of the justices was strictly along party lines, with justices appointed by Republicans voting to end the recount and democrats for the count to continue. Bush thus was awarded the electoral votes of Florida and won the presidency.
