A little late for that June wedding, but here's some wedding lore:

Why do brides usually stand on the left? The popular theory points back to ancient Greece and the days of marriage by capture, when a groom literally stole his bride from her family home. The groom typically held the bride with his left hand, keeping his right hand free to draw his sword. Even today bride-napping remains a problem in some countries.

Why is he called the "best" man? The groom had help in his escapades. Some grooms purportedly assembled raiding parties, often composed of fellow bachelors and their trusted best pals to take charge of the abduction. The best man was literally the best man with a sword, whose sole purpose was to aid and defend the groom during the risky capture attempt.

Why do bridesmaids dress alike? In Roman times, bridesmaids reportedly dressed not only like one another, but also like the bride. The goal was to camouflage the bride among her maids to better protect her from being captured on her wedding day – or from evil spirits attempting to crash the party and poison her union.

Why do brides wear veils? If an evil spirit did come looking to curse the couple, a veil helped hide the bride's identity. It also hid her face from her husband. In cultures in which arranged marriages were standard, it didn't hurt to conceal a bride's identity from her betrothed until the deal was sealed, just in case he had second thoughts at the altar.

Did you ever see the western, "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers"? It seems bride-napping may have even been popular in the old west days... But, it worked out good in this movie's cases 😊.
