It's the season of giving! From now until Christmas you won't be able to go into any shopping centers without seeing the red can, and hearing the ringing bell. But do you ever wonder what percentage of your dollars actually go to the charity of your choosing?

Here's a quick guide to ensure your dollars are making the most impact!

THE GOOD

American Red Cross

The do-gooders at the American Red Cross do a good job of spending your money when you donate. They manage to keep administrative expenses at less than 5 percent of their total overhead, and they spend about 91 cents for every dollar donated on actual programs that benefit the community. Whether it's teaching CPR or managing a crisis during the aftermath of a disaster, the Red Cross puts your money to good use.

Doctors Without Borders

These brave folks at Doctors Without Borders go into the most deplorable conditions to bring healing to others. Your money here is well spent. According to their website, about 89 percent of total revenue goes to supporting their programs.

St. Jude's Children's Hospital

St. Jude's Children's Hospital is known predominantly for their widespread fundraising campaigns. They pair celebrities with children who have cancer to talk about the great work they do. The hospital itself is a research hospital that specializes in childhood cancers and other life threatening diseases. No one is ever turned away for their inability to pay, and the hospital covers travel, housing, food, and treatment for the families whose children are patients there. Perhaps more remarkable, the hospital spends about 27 percent of its income on fundraising and administrative costs. Considering this is a hospital with significant expenses, the fact that St. Jude is able to come spend less than 33.3 percent benchmark is impressive. Overall, they do quite well with your donated dollars.

Salvation Army

The Salvation Army typically spends 82% of donations on aid. But during disasters, it draws from its budget so it can direct 100% at relief efforts.

THE BAD

Kids Wish Network

This charity was created to help children create memories with their families that they could cherish as they struggle with a serious illness. The only problem is that 97% of general donations don't go to these kids.

Cancer Fund of America

Here's another charity that has solicited more than $100 million in donations over the last decade. More than $75 million has been given to corporate solicitors from donations that were meant to go to cancer research. Because the donations aren't generally directed to a specific component of the charity, however, this gives the organization leeway to spend that cash in whatever way they wish.

American Breast Cancer Foundation

With $4.2 million spent on services for women suffering from breast cancer, at first glance this charity seems to be pretty good. Then you realize that the charity has raised over $85 million in total donations since its founding in 1997. Now consider the fact that 75% of incoming donations go right back to the solicitors who generated the funds or that out of the $85 million, nearly $20 million went back into the charity for various expenses.
